There is reason for thinkaffording some new and valuable ideas to the commissioners, both in a practical and theoretical way. There is a considerable differnce between the system made use of in our own and in other countries, and the result of best mode. We have a considerable advantage so far as the rapidity of transmitting messages is concerned, but on the other hand our friends across the water are more correct. While our companies send a thousand or twelve hundred messages with four or five errors, they send four or five hundred messages with no errors. Perhaps this fact may be a slight index of the comparative difference of the American and European charac-

> A petition signed by all the business houses on Emperior street, with a few exceptions, is to be presented to the City Council praying that the water, for this purpose, be furnished, free of charge, and offering to hire a suitable person to apply it to the street. The petition seems to be one that should be granted. It is not alone a benefit to those doing business thereabouts, but to the public generally, because that street is the principal highway of the city. The same privilege might properly be extended to other streets and would add much to the comfort of the great numbers of people who have occasion to pess through them.
